My wife and I took one of our children to New York last fall to be treated by a specialist for incipient cataract. We went to the Windsor it was in a quiet neighborbood and the second day after our arrival were greatly surprised when Mr. eland tapped at the door of our suite. He introduced himself unceremoniously, and explaining that the doctor had mentioned the case of our little girl, sat down for a friendly chat. In a few all were on the footing of trouble and expressed himself with such simple earnestness that our earts went out to him immediately. He told us of the scikness he had had in his own family and gave us some excellent suggestions in reference to nurses and so on. After that he never let a day go by without looking in. and he contributed a vast deal toward making our stay a pleasure instead of that we owed him a deep debt of grat-itude, the news of the burning of the atel, the terrible tragedy of his household and his own subsequent death came to us like a series of personal calamitles.
